Internship Checklist

An internship can provide you with relevant, hands-on experience. This kind of opportunity can be essential in making informed career decisions and increasing your "marketability" to potential employers. Internships can be for credit (if approved by your academic internship coordinator) or not-for-credit, and can be paid or unpaid. The experience will allow you to gain valuable "professional skills" over the course of a semester or during the summer months. We recommend you begin this process your sophomore year, but you will benefit from an internship at any time.
