WELCOME TO THE CENTRAL COMMUNITY!

UCM provides exceptional academic resources and the opportunity to interact with the many outstanding students, faculty, staff, alumni and friends who make our institution special. Founded in 1871, UCM is a comprehensive, public university that provides more than 150 areas of study and attracts students from around the world.

At UCM, we want your professors to know you by your first name. We want you to gain hands-on experience and have the opportunity to impact the community through service-learning projects. We strive to create a community that empowers you to shape the future and make friendships that will last a lifetime.

Standards

To create an atmosphere of academic excellence, the University must enroll and retain students who, through ongoing assessment and evaluation, meet or exceed established university academic standards. UCM grants degrees to students who fulfill program requirements and meet or exceed the minimum academic standards established by the University and the state of Missouri.

While in pursuit of their degree, students are expected to comply with all university policies and procedures, complete all degree requirements, and remain in good standing with the University.

At UCM, we expect you to learn more than the information that's provided in books. We want you to discover learning to a greater degree. This is a challenging goal that requires commitment from both the University and the students. The University's commitment and responsibilities are outlined in the annual student catalogs. Student qualification and responsibilities are outlined here.

Student Qualifications

Being a student and getting a high-quality education is a full-time job. When you choose to attend UCM, you are investing a large amount of time and money in yourself and your future, and UCM is investing its resources in you.

You are here for an education and UCM is here to provide it. For this to be possible, students must demonstrate they are qualified for ongoing enrollment and participation by remaining in good academic standing, engaging in good attendance and participation, and demonstrating good decision-making.

Good Academic Standing

Your most important job, as a student, is to learn. This is demonstrated, in large part, by your ability to meet classroom expectations and perform well in class. Student academic standing is determined by both the cumulative grade point average (GPA) and the UCM grade point average (GPA). UCM students who have both a 2.00 cumulative GPA and UCM GPA are in good academic standing and are eligible to enroll for classes.

Students can find their academic standing in MyCentral in the Student Services tab under "Check Your Registration Status" or "Unofficial Transcript".

Good Attendance and Participation

In order to reach these academic goals, you must regularly attend and participate in class. Regular class attendance and regular participation in online coursework are expected of all students at the University.

A college education is more than what happens in the classroom, however, and at UCM, students are encouraged to participate in a variety of activities outside of the classroom that create a well-rounded educational experience.

There are many things for students to do on campus including dances, plays, films, concerts, bowling, and being involved in clubs, intramural sports and student government. Taking part in social, cultural and athletic events provides students with many opportunities to learn about themselves, other people and the world in which they live.

Getting involved on campus gives students the opportunity to develop interpersonal and leadership skills that will serve them throughout their lives.

Good Decision-Making

UCM has embraced the belief that students are here for the purpose of learning. In the modern college setting, learning is a process and students must have an active role in constructing knowledge and developing skills rather than have them somehow delivered to them. This process of knowledge construction takes place in every aspect of the student's college experience, inside and outside the classroom; it is a dynamic, imprecise, and "messy" process. To facilitate this learning, students are expected to reflect upon UCM's Educational Mission and Core Values (Learning, Excellence, Service, Responsibility, Adaptability, Diversity, and Community). Students are expected to integrate these ideas and aspirations into their daily decision-making processes. In accordance with this premise, students should expect to be supported when they make educationally purposeful choices and challenged when the choices appear to be incongruent with their academic success.

In order to be successful at UCM, students are expected to explore and exercise their rights, and it is understood that in this process some errors in judgment will occur. This is a natural part of the learning process. Students are expected to reflect upon these choices in the context of responsible decision-making, honest discourse, and the appropriate use of university resources. Students who fail to fully embrace their responsibilities during this period of personal exploration may face consequences that are designed to guide them toward a more responsible decision-making framework. Students should learn from this process and make wiser, more informed decisions in the future. Actions and decisions that threaten the safety of others or substantially compromise the integrity of the educational environment cannot be tolerated, and students who repeatedly ignore their responsibilities may lose the opportunity to be a student at UCM.

Your Guide to Good Decision-Making was developed to assist students as they explore their rights and responsibilities; it is intended as an educational document not as a legal document. It is about fifty (50) pages long and evolves over time. It is not uncommon for someone to ask, "Do you really expect us to read all this?" The answer is "Yes, we do; it's important."

Student Rights & Responsibilities

At UCM, student rights and responsibilities are deeply and purposefully interconnected. To help facilitate student growth and development, the University has outlined six (6) of these key student rights and their corresponding responsibilities. These rights and responsibilities are further articulated in the Campus Community Creed and Core Values. This list is not all inclusive but instead provides a framework for understanding certain student expectations as they relate to educational conduct. In reviewing this framework, students are advised to reflect on the "spirit of the rule" and not just the "letter of the rule." Our rules reflect our deepest values and goals and we ask you to do more than just comply with them—embrace them.

As responsible citizens, students are expected to comply with all local, state, and federal policies, statutes, laws and ordinances. The University also has an obligation to comply with the law, and we have written our policies to comply with the requirements of the Jeanne Clery Disclosure of Campus Security Policy and Campus Crime Statistics (Clery) Act, the Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act (FERPA), Title IX of the Educational Amendments of 1972, the Drug Free Schools and Communities Act (EDGAR Part 86), the Sexual Violence Elimination (SaVE) Act, and other federal and state statutes and regulations.

The University welcomes feedback on how we can better meet these requirements in service to our campus community. Please keep in mind that the law is constantly evolving and UCM's policies and rules will adapt to reflect such changes periodically.

The Right to Pursue an Education

"The University of Central Missouri community is a LEARNING community, striving for academic and personal excellence and by promoting the value of education and lifelong learning."-UCM Community Creed

"Learning: Student learning and development are the primary purposes of the University of Central Missouri. All institutional services exist to support the academic mission of the institution, and student life is viewed as an important facet of the educational experience. UCM faculty and staff members believe strongly in the importance of educating the whole person and preparing students for lifelong learning. UCM provides students with a strong liberal arts and sciences foundation and strives to instill in each of them the importance of freedom of expression and inquiry. UCM is committed to improving public education in Missouri and beyond."

-UCM Core Values

- Students have the right to pursue an education.
- Students have a responsibility to make choices that are educationally purposeful.

Learning takes place inside and outside the classroom, on campus and off campus, throughout a student's educational career. UCM supports this learning by creating a wide range of opportunities, forums, services and experiences, and students are strongly encouraged to use these resources. Students have the right to request reasonable and appropriate support and assistance from other campus community members, including students, staff, and faculty in maintaining a climate conducive to thinking and learning. No student, however, should take any action that will restrict other individuals from pursuing their educational goals.

Additionally, learning requires the creation of original material for your classes and direct evaluation of your work as a student. There is also tremendous value in collaborative work when it is assigned by your instructor. The academic integrity of the University is based on this foundation of honest dialogue and exchange between the instructor and the student. Students who submit work that is not their own have violated this fundamental trust. Dishonesty, inappropriate collaboration, plagiarism or other misrepresentations of your work are actions considered antithetical to learning and will be treated as serious violations of university policy.

The Right to Privacy and Free Expression

"The University of Central Missouri community is an OPEN community where civil dialogue is a critical element in developing respect for individuals whose values, ideas, beliefs, and life experiences may be different from our own."-UCM Community Creed

Students have the right to express themselves. Students also have the right to expect a reasonable standard of privacy and should have the opportunity to limit the release of their personal information.

- Students have a responsibility to express themselves in a manner that is purposeful, honest, situationally appropriate, and respectful of the rights and privacy of others. Students also have a responsibility to refrain from illegal, disruptive or dangerous activities.

Student expression is essential to learning and personal expression is a fundamental right. It is likely that such expression could lead to lively discussion and constructive disagreement. Any expression that is unlawful or is intended or serves to disrupt the learning of others or the learning environment is a violation of university policy.

It is also understood that learning is hampered by oppressive and aggressive monitoring of every action and decision. Students certainly should expect a reasonable standard of privacy, and they should have the right to limit how their personal information is accessed by a third party. This essential right to privacy, however, does not exempt the student from all interaction with others in the college environment nor does it shield their activities from all external scrutiny. Students are considered active participants in the college community and in order to learn, they have a responsibility to engage appropriately with others in the learning community. To this end, students have the responsibility to engage in reasonable standards of self-care, refrain from illegal, disruptive or dangerous activities, and to use university resources safely and appropriately.

The university has an obligation to suspend the right of privacy when a student's health or safety may be compromised. UCM's CARE Team, a cross disciplinary group of experienced and knowledgeable professionals who review concerns about student behavior, may intervene to prevent foreseeable harm or campus disruption.

Additionally, as a state supported educational institution that accepts federal financial aid, UCM has a legal responsibility to comply with state and federal law. This includes federal guidelines on the handling of student information (FERPA) and crime reporting statistics (CLERY) that must be shared with state and federal agencies.

The Right to Develop and Pursue a Personal Academic and Career Plan

"The University of Central Missouri community is PURPOSEFUL, and students are challenged to develop their personal goals while also helping to shape and achieve common goals."

-UCM Community Creed

"Excellence: The University of Central Missouri sets high expectations for students and graduates and demands excellence in teaching and in delivery of services. UCM promotes quality and excellence in staff and faculty members through its many professional development activities. The University promotes the development and well-being of each member of the campus community, which in turn fosters a strong commitment to the institution."-UCM Core Values

- Students have a right to chart their own path and develop a personal academic plan that moves them toward a promising future.
- Students have the responsibility to attend class, meet administrative and educational deadlines, complete course requirements, follow university policies and pay fees on time.

Your degree must be earned; it will not be given to you. Important elements of earning your degree include abiding by the rules, guidelines and procedures that govern the University; meeting academic expectations; and completing the requirements UCM has articulated for degree completion.

The Right to Non-Discrimination and Equal Access

“The University of Central Missouri community is a JUST community and students are expected to participate in ways that are ethical, honest, equitable, trustworthy, civil, and respectful.”

-UCM Community Creed

“Diversity: The University of Central Missouri is committed to attracting and supporting a diverse body of students, faculty and staff members. The campus strives to be responsive to the specific needs of people with physical handicaps and offers educational programs to allow all students to reach their full potential. UCM encourages acceptance and respect of individuals with differing values, ideas, beliefs, abilities and life experiences. The University promotes good citizenship, a sense of civic responsibility, global awareness and an appreciation for human diversity at all levels.”-UCM Core Values

Students should expect to be treated fairly and equitably by administrators, faculty, and staff in accordance with state and federal law. Students have the right to engage with other learners in an environment that is free from illegal intimidation, harassment and discrimination, and other conduct that is prohibited by law.

At UCM, we want students to be exposed to other individuals from widely diverse backgrounds. This opportunity is part of what makes the college experience extraordinary and exciting. Through these interactions, we want students to engage in lively, respectful debate of complex issues while simultaneously reflecting and developing their own world views.

In some cases, lively debate can lead to disagreement and misunderstanding. Students should develop the skills to handle such disagreements with respect and civility. Your faculty, Student Experience and Engagement staff, organization advisors and other students can help you learn these skills. At the same time, persons who engage in conduct that constitutes harassment or discrimination as defined in applicable university policies, or that is otherwise prohibited by law, will be held accountable in a manner consistent with their rights as citizens under state and federal law.

The Right to a Reasonably Safe Learning Environment

“The University of Central Missouri community is a CARING community where students are encouraged to pursue and support the well-being of themselves and others.”

-UCM Community Creed

- Students have the right to be reasonably safe and to take reasonable actions to protect themselves from violence.
- Students have a responsibility to refrain from actions that jeopardize their own safety or the safety of others.

Risk is an element of every human activity. We expose ourselves to varying degrees of risk when we step in the shower, walk down a flight of stairs, and drive to class. It is also normal to seek out risk in certain circumstances (such as trying something new, asking someone out on a date, challenging the status quo, etc.). While some risks are minor, other risky choices can put you or others in danger. Students are expected to avoid situations and choices that involve unreasonably dangerous risks, and they are expected to immediately and fully cooperate with university officials, law enforcement, and emergency personnel in the completion of their duties. At UCM students have a right to a tobacco-free, drug-free, weapons-free and alcohol-free learning environment. Some personal safety resources and tips can be found on the TIPS homepage.

The Right to a Fair Process

“The University of Central Missouri is a DISCIPLINED community where students are expected to fulfill personal responsibilities, by upholding university guidelines, and by working toward self and community betterment.”-UCM Community Creed

“Responsibility: The University of Central Missouri places a high value on being ethical in all practices, and faculty members strive to impress this value upon their students. UCM strives to employ the most efficient and appropriate use of fiscal and human resources in order to provide students with a quality, affordable higher education experience. Faculty and staff members value fact-based decision making through collegial deliberation.”-UCM Core Values

- Students have a right to fair processes and the right to appeal or seek clarification on decisions which they believe are inappropriate.
- Students have a responsibility to participate in those processes.

Students have a right to fair process which is, fundamentally, the right to receive notice they may have breached their student responsibilities and the opportunity to be heard on that issue. There is an important distinction between a fair process as it relates to educational conduct and the “due process” that is afforded to criminals in the legal system. Fair processes in educational conduct matters are intended to ensure that students have an opportunity to understand how they may have violated a policy and have the opportunity to explain their involvement, if any, in that event. Students will be assigned a Conduct Educator to assist them with this process and evaluate the situation. If the student has reason to believe the Conduct Educator cannot evaluate the case in an appropriate manner, they can request an alternate Conduct Educator. This process does not afford students the right to directly confront other students. In some cases involving mental health concerns, serious legal matters, or potentially dangerous situations, this educational conference is compulsory and may require an immediate response from the student. In the interest of health and safety some actions, including temporary suspension, may be enacted before all elements of the educational conduct process are met. The University will fulfill its obligation to provide a fair process before a final decision is made about a student’s status.

This educational conference is outlined in greater detail in the following section, but the essential concept is the notion that the educational conduct process relies on full, honest participation by students.

Student Conduct Expectations

The University has a direct educational interest in how one conducts oneself as a student. This concern extends beyond the classroom and is not restricted to formal educational experiences or the boundaries of campus. Student conduct refers to all the choices one makes in the learning landscape.

Student conduct expectations at UCM are based on the firmly held belief that students, faculty, and staff must constructively collaborate to create an environment that fosters, encourages and supports the educational mission of the institution. Students have a unique and integral role in creating the educational environment. They are challenged to identify and pursue their personal educational objectives while simultaneously sharing responsibility for constructing the learning and living landscape in which that learning occurs.

UCM's student conduct expectations are based on the precepts of personal responsibility, educational purposefulness, and community accountability. Appropriate student conduct is a condition of graduation.

The Educational Conduct Process and the Role of the Conduct Educator

Students who may have violated a university policy will have an opportunity to meet with a "Conduct Educator". These Conduct Educators are university personnel who are trained to critically examine your decision-making process, recognize examples of good judgment and hold students accountable for incidents of poor judgment. The role of the Conduct Educator is to help students "navigate their way toward full independence and individual responsibility" (Bickel & Lake, 1999). To accomplish this, conduct educators will facilitate personal reflection and growth through the lens of student development. To this end, conduct educators are empowered to look at a student's overall progress, including their overall academic performance, and outline courses of action that may be necessary in order for the student to remain in good standing as a student at the University.

The Conduct Educator will review the available information and make a determination about the likelihood an error in judgment occurred. The decision of the Conduct Educator is the official determination by the University on whether or not a violation of policy has occurred. If it is their determination a policy has been violated, then the student should expect to be held accountable for that decision.

The student conduct process is purposefully distinct from external legal processes. It is an educational process that embraces the language and spirit of student development. It is a required Educational Conference to determine if an individual's actions are congruent with their responsibilities as a student. The educational conduct process is not bound by court timelines, external rules of evidence, confrontational discourse, or the same "burden of proof" used in the court system.

Educational Conferences

The primary tool of the Conduct Educator is the opportunity for an "Educational Conference" with the student.

When the University becomes aware of a student who may not be meeting the expectations of good decision-making (usually through an academic alert from faculty, public safety report, or housing report), then the student will be contacted (generally by email) to schedule an Educational Conference.

An Educational Conference might also be required if university personnel identify a pattern of behaviors or decisions that illustrate poor decision-making or potential risk. A student may also request an Educational Conference if there is a concern they would like to discuss.

An Educational Conference may also be required in order to help UCM staff prevent a foreseeable negative event. For example, if staff become aware that students have planned a large and potentially risky party, those students might be required to meet with a Conduct Educator to discuss how they plan to manage that event and minimize the risk to attendees.

The Educational Conference should be viewed as an opportunity for a student to clarify their decision-making process and, in the case of poor judgment, take responsibility for correcting that error. The Educational Conference is designed to be a civil but critical examination of the student's decision-making process and direct discussion of choices the student has made. This process is only effective if a student participates openly, respectfully and honestly. Deception and incivility reduce the ability of the Conduct Educator to assist the student in evaluating the educational purposefulness of their choices and will not be tolerated.

Students are responsible for regularly checking their campus email and for responding to the request for an Educational Conference in a timely manner (within five (5) class days of the date on the email). This is a basic expectation of all students and failure to do so can have significant consequences.

A student may choose to bring one advisor to the Educational Conference. In most cases, this advisor is a peer, parent or trusted advisor. The role of this advisor is to assist the student in reflecting on their choices and to assist with the learning process. The advisor will not be involved in determining the facts of a situation. It is important to note that the Conduct Educator will direct all discourse to the student.

The student is expected to participate fully and respectfully in the Educational Conference. In some cases, students may choose not to meet with a Conduct Educator. This decision may have significant consequences. In a classroom setting, students who choose not to attend class may fail the course, lose financial aid resources, and drop out of good standing with the University. In the educational conduct setting, students who choose not to meet with their Conduct Educator must still abide by the decisions of the Conduct Educator. In situations where a significant error in judgment has been made, the student may lose their opportunity to continue their studies at UCM.

Learning Action Plans

At the conclusion of the Educational Conference, the Conduct Educator may decide that the situation has been resolved or is a misunderstanding that requires no additional follow up. In other cases, the Conduct Educator may require the student to take additional steps (such as participation in an educational program) to demonstrate that they have learned from this process. It is the responsibility of the student to complete this learning action plan in the manner and timeframe determined by the Conduct Educator.

Some incidents of poor decision-making may require an immediate response on the part of the student in order to demonstrate they understand the important nature of their choices. Other decisions may result in restitution to a harmed party, mandatory participation in a course or program at the student's expense, among other potential consequences. Serious lapses in judgment (particularly those that involve dishonesty or harm to others) may necessitate altering or terminating a student's status.

In general, a student should expect to be contacted by the Conduct Educator (by email or letter) within five (5) class days after the Educational Conference. Students are responsible for following up on the action plan outlined in this email or letter.

Reviews

Students have a right to request a review of the decision of the original Conduct Educator if they disagree with that individual's assessment of the situation or the learning action plan they have outlined. This review must be submitted, by letter or by email, to the Vice Provost for Student Experience and Engagement or his/her designee (for university matters) or an Assistant Director from University Housing (for Housing, Greek Life and apartment matters) within five (5) class days of the decision of the original Conduct Educator.

This Review Agent is also a Conduct Educator. This individual's role is to review the original process, the learning action plan (or change to student status), and the rationale for the review. They may choose to reject the request for review outright, directly act on the request, or invite the student in for a new Educational Conference. He/she will then make a determination about whether or not to uphold, alter or reverse the original decision in whole or in part.

The new Conduct Educator will notify the student of their decision within five (5) class days of his/her decision. The decision of this Conduct Educator is final and will not be reviewed further.

Evaluation Periods

Another important tool of the Conduct Educator is the "Evaluation Period."

The Evaluation Period is intended as an opportunity for personal reflection and purposeful action during which time a student may expect enhanced scrutiny by Conduct Educators. This period of reflection is an opportunity for students to demonstrate excellent decision-making.

The intent of the Evaluation Period is to help students refocus on purposeful educational decisions. To help students succeed in this endeavor, some external parameters may be applied to their decision-making framework. For example, in some cases, the Evaluation Period may:

- Limit your ability to work on campus
- Restrict your campus living options
- Delay enrollment in a future semester

While this may be uncomfortable, the intent is constructive. If you have questions, you should discuss these restrictions with your Conduct Educator.

The Evaluation Period is distinct from "Academic Probation" but may prompt educational interventions and could include the addition of mandatory coursework.

Except in unusual circumstances, the Evaluation Period will not exceed one calendar year.

Restrictions in and Removal from the Academic Environment

In some cases, it may be necessary for a student to be restricted from certain areas of campus (for example, due to safety concerns) or removed from the learning environment altogether.

Building or campus restrictions: If a student has harmed or threatened to harm another student, trespassed, violated privacy concerns, or made other choices that put individuals at risk, they may be restricted from some or all of campus. Generally, this is done to protect others from harassment or possible harm. These restrictions are enforced by the Office of Public Safety, and anyone violating such a restriction will be arrested for trespassing and may be immediately restricted from all of campus.

Suspension: Suspension is a temporary interruption in coursework during which time a student may be restricted from attending class. The duration of a Suspension may range from a few days to a year or more depending upon the circumstances. Short Suspensions (up to ten (10) class days) may be issued by the Office of Student Experience and Engagement (SEE) prior to an Education Conference if there is reason to believe an individual poses a risk to themselves or others. In these cases, the student is expected to schedule an Educational Conference with the Associate Vice Provost for Student Services (or their designee) within the ten (10) day timeframe. If the student does not arrange this conference, the Associate Vice Provost may choose to end the Suspension, extend it indefinitely, or take other actions.

Expulsion: Expulsion is the permanent severing of the relationship between the University and the student. Expulsion is reserved for serious situations that pose a risk to others or for situations where the academic integrity of the University has been compromised.

Medical withdrawals: In some cases, a student may miss a portion of a class due to a medical situation. It is important, in these situations, for the student to contact the Office of Student Experience and Engagement (SEE). SEE will assist you in notifying faculty in order to give you an opportunity to make up missed work. If a student is out for an extended period of time, that student should work with SEE to explore withdrawal and refund options.

Other Mandatory Withdrawals: If a student fails to attend class, is institutionalized, or is incarcerated for an extended period of time (generally two (2) or more weeks), they may be administratively withdrawn from classes without the student's approval. Additionally, students who are no longer qualified to be students may be administratively withdrawn.

Previous misconduct: The University reserves the right to deny admission to any person because of previous misconduct that may substantially affect the interest of the University, or to admit such a person on an appropriate disciplinary status. The University also reserves the right to withhold authority to register from any student or former student because of previous misconduct that may substantially affect the interests of the University or to assign appropriate disciplinary status to the student or former student.

Other safety concerns: To create a safe environment UCM officials may situationally require students to take constructive actions including referrals to on or off campus care providers, trainings, and verification from outside medical professionals about a student's ability to function safely in a university environment. Students who fail to complete these constructive actions may be restricted from returning to campus or to the learning environment.

Psychological Wellness and the Counseling Center

College is usually a time of many changes and new challenges. Naturally you will experience some ups and downs. Much of the time, you will take on and overcome these difficulties on your own. Sometimes you will turn to friends, family or faculty for guidance or support, but there are times when professional help is useful. How will you know if it's a good idea to seek help at the Counseling Center?

•Your usual ways of coping are not working. Maybe you have talked to friends or family and still you are struggling. It might be that those close to you are encouraging you to "get some help." Maybe you have tried "simply working harder" to no avail. It might be that your current difficulty is a challenge you have faced before without success.

•You have a lot of emotional distress, such as anxiety or depression or you are not doing well academically, socially or physically. Maybe you are not sleeping well or are drinking alcohol more than usual. It might be that people close to you are saying they are concerned about you. Maybe you are less interested in, or are withdrawing from, friends. It could be that friends are responding to you in ways you don't understand or appreciate. Possibly you are not concentrating as well as usual, not attending classes regularly or maybe your motivation is sliding.

If you are experiencing these concerns, the Counseling Center can help. Call 660-543-4060 to schedule an appointment. A counselor will meet with you to talk with you about your concerns and help you develop a plan of action.

If you have been in ongoing counseling before coming to college and want to continue in counseling, it is best to keep working with the same counselor if at all possible. If your current counselor is some distance away, check to see if you can have appointments over the phone or by computer. If you cannot continue with the same provider while in college and you want ongoing counseling, be aware that the Counseling Center offers only brief services. If you want open ended counseling, you would need to obtain that from an off-campus provider. You can get information about local providers from the Counseling Center staff. This information is also on the Counseling Center website along with crisis hotline numbers and other resources.

If you are taking medication for a psychological concern, you should not stop or change the medication without talking to your prescribing physician. While college can be a "fresh start," it is also a transition with many challenges and stressors. Generally, it is not a good time to stop taking medication, unless you and your physician agree that it is the right plan for you.

Taking Care of Caregivers

Sometimes those who are demonstrating care and concern for others forsake their own well-being in the efforts to be helpful. If you are assisting a peer, friend or loved-one with difficult issues, please be aware that campus resources are available to help you. If someone you know is thinking about hurting themselves, don't try to bear that burden alone; ask for help.

A Caring Approach to Recovery from Self-Harm

If a student has attempted self-harm, expressed intent to harm oneself, or has caused a significant disruption to the campus community in relation to a mental health concern, they are required to meet with the Associate Vice Provost for Student Services before returning to class. This mandatory meeting is an opportunity to explore resources and develop strategies for success. This is a Wellness Follow-up, not an Educational Conference as previously described. It is a critical, educationally purposeful meeting; students who do not fulfill this requirement may not be allowed to continue their coursework.

Involving Families and Others

The Associate Vice Provost for Student Services facilitates communication between the University and families in support of student success. The purpose of this communication is to mobilize resources to support students as they strive to reach their potential.

We believe strongly that families can best contribute to student success when they are fully aware of the challenges and opportunities facing today's college students, including academic and co-curricular expectations for students. We strongly encourage parents to learn about student support services and understand how their students can access these resources (for example: tutoring programs and the many resources available in the Learning Commons).

As a part of this partnership, families are encouraged to discuss and embrace UCM's goals for student learning. These goals include:

- Challenging the student to identify, define, and solve problems independently.
- Encouraging the student to set and achieve personal goals and make responsible decisions related to academics, career planning, social interactions, and community engagement.
- Understanding and supporting UCM's commitment to academic excellence, access with support to succeed, integrity, ethical behavior, diversity, respectful relationships, freedom of inquiry and sustainability.
- Empowering the student to examine personal values.
- Encouraging the student to learn about and respect the values and beliefs of others
- Supporting the student as he/she faces conditions of uncertainty and learns to perform in complex environments and challenging situations.
- Allowing the student to accept consequences of his/her actions and accept responsibility for personal errors.
- Urging the student to examine disappointments and unexpected experiences in order to assess what caused them, what can be done about them, and how to avoid them in the future.

We know it may be hard for a parent or guardian to know when to step in and when to empower your student.

We believe family members are often mentors to their children. It is our hope that you will promote their self-advocacy by allowing them to make decisions independently and demonstrate responsibility when those choices result in negative outcomes.

If you are concerned about your student's physical or mental health, please contact appropriate campus or community authorities immediately.

- Student Experience & Engagement: 660-543-4114

Please be aware the University of Central Missouri may contact and involve families in order to gain assistance from parents when students under the age of twenty-one (21) have an alcohol or drug violation or if they are engaged in other behaviors that pose health or safety risks to themselves or other students.

We also want to remind families that there are federal laws (for example the Federal Educational Rights and Privacy Act of 1974 and the Health Insurance Portability and Accountability Act of 1996) that place limitations on parents' ability to access student records. Please contact Student Experience and Engagement if you have questions about these limitations and how we can still partner and appropriately communicate to promote the success of your student.

Specific Policies

The preceding discussion focused on the concepts of student development, integrity, and ethical decision-making. This is intended to help students develop a personal and purposeful decision-making model that will help them excel in the college environment. It is also intended to provide a framework for outlining how the University will respond to incidents of poor judgment.

The following section describes several important university policies including policies that are unique to certain environments (such as university housing). These policy descriptions should not be construed to be comprehensive. The absence of a clear rule does not necessarily justify a poor decision. As previously stated, the purpose of the educational conduct process is the development of a consistent and ethical decision-making framework. In all cases, students are advised again to reflect on "the spirit of the rule" and not just "the letter of the rule." If a student finds herself or himself in the position of arguing about the wording of a policy, they may well have violated the spirit of the policy and they can expect to be held accountable for that decision. If students feel like a policy can be improved, they are encouraged to contact the Office of Student Experience and Engagement to provide feedback and suggestions.

The University recognizes that from a practical standpoint, it is helpful for students to know these specific rules and the likely consequences of violating these rules. The drawback to this approach is the tendency for students to make decisions based solely on the severity of the consequence. The educational conduct process is designed to help individuals examine policy violations through the lens of good decision making. The consequences for poor decision making may vary from student to student depending upon the degree to which they understand and act to rectify poor choices. Students who recognize their mistakes and take responsibility for their choices are generally demonstrating greater self-reflection and understanding than those who blame others for their own choices. Consequently, two individuals may make the same poor choice but face very different outcomes from the educational conduct process.

The following specific policies are provided as a guide to good decision-making, but this should not be interpreted as an all-inclusive list of inappropriate behavior.

Academic & Personal Integrity

All members of the UCM community are expected to act with professional, personal, and academic integrity. These simple principles lie at the heart of our intellectual community. Academic integrity, in particular, means honesty and responsibility in scholarship and it is absolutely essential in the college environment. It is one of our highest ideals and highest standards. Academic assignments exist to help students learn; grades exist to show how fully this goal is attained. Therefore, all work and all grades should result from the student's own understanding and personal effort.

The University has the responsibility for maintaining academic integrity so as to protect the quality of education on our campus and to protect those who depend upon our integrity. It is the responsibility of the student to refrain from violations of academic integrity, from conduct that may lead to suspicion of academic misconduct, and from conduct that aids others in such misconduct. It is the responsibility of the faculty to establish and maintain an environment that supports academic integrity. An essential part of this faculty responsibility is the enforcement of existing standards of academic integrity. If faculty members do not discourage and act upon violations of which they become aware, respect for those standards is undermined. Faculty members are expected to provide students with a clear statement of their expectations concerning academic integrity.

UCM recognizes that standards and expectations for citing the work of others in the modern, digital age can be confusing. We also recognize that most students want to do their own work, contribute appropriately to group work, and be recognized for their own accomplishments. In general, academic misconduct is interpreted as any act which improperly affects the evaluation of a student's academic performance or achievement. Misconduct occurs when the student either knows or reasonably should know that the act constitutes misconduct. The following guideposts are intended to help students avoid accidental misconduct and reflect on what constitutes academic integrity.

- Protect your work and know your rights. Do not let other students in your class diminish the value of your achievement by claiming your work as their own. In examinations, do not allow your neighbors to see what you have written; you are the only one who should receive credit for what you know.
- Acknowledge your sources. When you are presenting words or ideas that are not your own, you are expected to appropriately acknowledge your source. For example, when writing a paper, use quotation marks where appropriate and cite your source in a footnote or in a list of sources that you consulted.
- Avoid the appearance of dishonesty. Do not put yourself in a position where you have unauthorized material in a testing environment or where you can be suspected of having copied another person's work. Even the appearance of dishonesty may undermine your instructor's confidence in your work.
- Do your own original work, collaborate when assigned to do so by your instructor, and don't resubmit work previously completed for another class. The purpose of assignments is to develop your skills and measure your progress. Letting someone else do your work defeats the purpose of your education and may lead to serious charges against you. Resubmitting old work does not promote new learning.

- Never falsify a record or permit another person to do so. Academic records are regularly audited and students whose grades have been altered put their entire transcript at risk.
- Never fabricate data, citations, or experimental results. Many professional careers have ended in disgrace, even years after the fabrication first took place.
- Always tell the truth when discussing your work with your instructor. Any attempt to deceive may destroy the relationship between the instructor and the student.
- Report any academic dishonesty you see to your instructor or department chair.

Violations of Academic Honesty are determined by your instructors and can result in serious academic consequences including failing grades, removal from class, removal from a field of study or even the termination of your student status. Please take this issue seriously and proactively ask for guidance from your instructors if you are uncertain how to properly cite the work of others.

Students are also expected to be honest and demonstrate integrity in non-academic matters outside of class. The University of Central Missouri seeks to promote and ensure personal integrity among students and other members of the university community by taking a stand against dishonesty, theft, fraud and misrepresentation of facts. Students are encouraged to take responsibility for their decisions and be thoughtful of how their actions impact on others. In support of this important goal, the following actions may be considered serious violations of university policy:

- Lying, deceiving or conveying false information for the purpose of causing another person or official to act or refrain from acting.
- Stealing any property or services from another person, group or the University.
- Embezzling, defrauding, or procuring any money, goods, services or thing of value under false pretenses, including the issuance of check, draft, money order or use of a credit card knowing that it will be dishonored upon presentation for payment.
- Purchasing, receiving, using or benefiting from any property, money, services or thing of value knowing it to have been obtained or made available through theft or deceit.
- Forging, altering or misusing any document, record or identification or causing any false information to be entered upon any record or presented at any proceeding.

Some thoughts on alcohol, tobacco and other drugs:

Our expectation is that your decisions about alcohol, tobacco or other drug use will be guided by the law and common sense, by information about how these substances may impact your ability to be successful as a student and by an understanding of the potential impact your use may have on those in the university community. All students, employees and visitors are expected to comply with local, state and federal laws that govern the possession, use, distribution, and sale of alcohol, tobacco or other drugs.

Misuse of alcohol or other mind or body-altering substances can negatively affect cognitive processes and may limit your ability to exercise good judgment and to learn effectively. This is contrary to the educational purposefulness described earlier and is cause for concern by the University. In addition, all alcohol and other drug use carries with it some inherent risks. These include but are not limited to addiction, accidents or injury due to impairment, overdose, damage to internal organs or a developing fetus, and unpredictable or violent behavior. Therefore, regardless of age or legal standing, students who underperform in class due to alcohol or other drugs, become over-intoxicated, or suffer medical consequences such as blacking out should expect to discuss their alcohol or other drug use with a Conduct Educator and evaluate how their decisions may be impacting their academic success.

Alcohol Policies

The use of alcohol on campus by those over twenty-one (21) is regulated by the University and is only allowed where explicitly indicated. Students ages twenty-one (21) or older who choose to consume alcoholic beverages in their residence hall rooms are expected to do so in moderation to ensure residents' rights to privacy, sleep and study. Students twenty-one (21) or older who distribute alcohol, consume alcohol in public areas, or otherwise compromise the safety of themselves or others due to intoxication should also expect to discuss how their decision-making process is impacting their success and the integrity of the academic environment. In each of these cases, poor decision-making will likely result in a referral to Health and Wellness Promotion in the Office of Campus Community Health for a brief assessment, motivational interview, or mandatory educational program. Students may be financially responsible for these referrals.

The following is a general list of local, state and federal laws to be aware of. It is illegal:

- to purchase or consume alcohol if you are under the age of twenty-one (21).
- to provide alcohol to those under the age of twenty-one (21).
- to sell alcohol without a liquor license provided by the city and state. This includes charging admission to an event to cover the cost of the alcohol. If the alcohol cannot be consumed without money being provided, the law views this as selling alcohol.
- to possess an open container of alcohol in public in the city of Warrensburg, including the UCM campus.
- to possess, sell or use a fictitious or altered identification, or identification belonging to another.
- to drive under the influence of alcohol or other drugs.
- to possess, sell or use any controlled substance or paraphernalia used with a controlled substance.
- to possess, sell or use prescription drugs without a prescription.

Marijuana and Other Drugs

Federal law and university regulations prohibit possessing, using, and distributing illegal drugs, drug paraphernalia, and/or controlled substances (including, but not limited to, marijuana, narcotics, or prescription drugs intended for use by another individual) in any residential complex or anywhere on university property. Using or possessing marijuana in any form, including without limitation tinctures, edibles and topicals, is prohibited on all UCM property, and students who use or possess marijuana are subject to disciplinary action.

Students who misuse prescription drugs, use illegal drugs, distribute drugs or otherwise compromise the safety of themselves or others due to intoxication or drug use should also expect to discuss how their decision-making process is impacting their success and the integrity of the academic environment. In each of these cases, poor decision-making will likely result in a referral to Health and Wellness Promotion in the Office of Campus Community Health for a brief assessment, motivational interview, or mandatory educational program. Students may be financially responsible for these referrals.

UCM's concern regarding mind-altering and body altering substances is not limited by the current legality of those substances. This concern extends to include all known illegal drugs but also includes the misuse of prescription and non-prescription drugs, misuse of new and emerging drugs, and/or misuse of other substances not intended for human consumption.

Other Considerations and Assistance

Students should know the sanctions for violating these laws may be significant, including fines, community service, or jail time. Additionally, a violation such as this can have long term impact on your career. For example, using a fake ID to purchase alcohol is not only unlawful but is also viewed very negatively by many employers, particularly those associated with educational agencies, safety and criminal justice programs, government agencies, etc. This is an example of a poor choice that can have long term negative effects on your career goals.

If you or someone you know is struggling with their use of alcohol or other drugs, the University has resources that can help. Information on referrals and assistance with alcohol or drug-related problems is available from the Counseling Center (660-543-4060), University Health Center (660-543-4770), or Human Resources (660-543-4255). Additionally, within Warrensburg the following recovery and treatment resources are available: Alcoholics Anonymous (660-747-6313), Compass Health Network (844-853-8937) and Recovery Lighthouse (660-429-2222).

Tobacco-Free UCM

UCM desires to provide a respectful, safe, healthy, and clean environment for all of our students, faculty, staff and visitors, and are proud to be a tobacco-free campus. As a tobacco-free campus, UCM provides a healthier, cleaner living learning environment for the campus community and those who visit us. Out of respect for guests and those who may find it difficult not to use tobacco while on campus, individuals may continue to use tobacco in their personal vehicles. See ucmo.edu/free for more information about our tobacco-free campus.

UCM provides tobacco cessation assistance for students and employees who would like to stop using tobacco. For more information visit

Emergency Amnesty Policy

The University of Central Missouri is committed to the safety and welfare of our students and seeks to facilitate access and remove barriers to students seeking medical assistance for alcohol and/or drug related emergencies and in cases involving sexual assault or sexual misconduct. UCM expects students to seek immediate medical or emergency assistance (e.g. calling the police at 911 or 543-4123, asking for immediate assistance from a Community Adviser, etc.) when they are concerned about their own health or that of another student.

The amnesty process was developed to emphasize that UCM supports students who make the decision to seek assistance from an emergency or medical professional for themselves or a friend. UCM never wants to be witness to a tragedy that could have been prevented, simply because a person feared coming forward to seek help.

The Amnesty Policy applies to the student in need of medical attention and to the student(s) seeking medical attention on behalf of another person. It also applies to students seeking assistance in relation to an instance of sexual violence. We recognize that students are sometimes reluctant to seek help because they believe that by doing so, they will expose themselves to disciplinary action. We want to remove this fear and focus on student safety. This amnesty policy tries to ensure that students receive:

- 1) Immediate medical assistance.
- 2) Follow-up interventions, if appropriate, to reduce the likelihood of future occurrences.

Students receive amnesty when it is determined by a Conduct Educator that they appropriately sought emergency or medical attention for themselves or medical assistance was sought for them even if they had been using alcohol or other drugs. If amnesty applies, the student will not be found in violation of university alcohol or drug policy (and potentially other policy violations) but may still be required to complete a referral.

Through this referral, students may be required to:

- Complete an assessment with a substance abuse prevention professional.
- Comply with the substance abuse prevention professional's recommendations by an established deadline. For most first-time alcohol incidents, the eCheckUpToGo program will be used. First-time drug incidents will utilize a similar program. Students are responsible for any costs associated with these referrals.

Students seeking medical attention on behalf of another person will not receive disciplinary actions for seeking help. However, depending on their involvement, they may also be required to meet with university administrators such as the substance abuse prevention professional and follow through with recommendations.

Failure to comply with either emergency medical treatment (including refusal to follow the recommendations of campus personnel, University Health Center personnel, Public Safety, and/or Johnson County EMS personnel concerning transportation to the University Health Center or one of the local emergency rooms) or follow-up interventions may disqualify a person from the Amnesty Policy and the student may be referred back to the Associate Vice Provost for Student Services or designated Conduct Educator for action.

Please note that this policy does not protect those students who repeatedly or flagrantly violate the Student Code of Conduct. The availability of amnesty is at the discretion of the Associate Vice Provost for Student Services or designated Conduct Educator.

Signs of Alcohol Poisoning or Overdose

Alcohol poisoning can occur when an individual has consumed a large amount of alcohol in a short amount of time. Recognizing the signs of alcohol poisoning or drug overdose is extremely important. It is not necessary that all symptoms are present before you seek help. If you are unsure, it is imperative that you err on the side of caution and get immediate help.

Signs of alcohol poisoning or drug overdose include, but are not limited to:

- vomiting
- confusion
- stupor
- seizures
- slow breathing (less than eight breaths a minute)
- irregular breathing
- blue-tinged skin or pale skin
- low body temperature (feels cold or clammy)
- semi-conscious or unconscious and unresponsive

Amphetamine overdose may include: rapid heartbeat, increased body temperature, and behavior changes.

To seek help, call 911 or UCM Police at 660-543-4123, or ask for immediate assistance from a Community Advisor.

Never leave an unconscious person alone or assume they will sleep it off! While waiting for help, turn the intoxicated person on his or her side. Do not try to make them vomit. Persons with alcohol poisoning have an impaired gag reflex and may choke on their vomit or accidentally inhale vomit into their lungs.

If you have any questions about the Amnesty Policy, please contact the Associate Vice President for Student Services at 660-543-4114.

If you would like information about signs and symptoms of alcohol poisoning or drug overdose, please contact the University Health Center at 660-543-4770.

UCM's Sexual Misconduct Policy & Title IX

The University of Central Missouri (UCM) believes that all students should have the opportunity to learn in an educational environment free from unlawful discrimination and harassment. To this end, UCM maintains comprehensive policies, procedures and practices consistent with UCM's obligations under Title IX. Sexual harassment of students, including sexual violence and other forms of sexual misconduct, will not be tolerated.

The statistics on sexual violence are deeply troubling, and the impact of sexual violence on students can be devastating. According to the "Dear Colleague" letter released by the Office of Civil Rights in April 2011, "A report prepared for the National Institute of Justice found that about 1 in 5 women are victims of completed or attempted sexual assault while in college. The report also found that approximately 6.1 percent of males were victims of completed or attempted sexual assault during college."

At UCM, we are committed to preventing instances of sexual violence, actively assisting those who have been victimized, and working to create an educational environment free from gender, sex and sexual orientation discrimination in connection with all the academic, educational, extracurricular, athletic, and other programs of the University, whether those programs take place in UCM facilities, on a school bus, in a class or during a training program. UCM is also fully committed to developing and implementing effective sexual harassment policies and to providing training on this issue for students and staff.

Sexual misconduct (including sexual harassment, sexual assault, sexual violence and dating or relationship violence) is prohibited at UCM under Title IX protections. Due to statutory requirements, incidents which may involve a violation of an individuals' Title IX protections (including sexual misconduct and other forms of sexual discrimination) have a process that is distinct from the educational conference described in the preceding section.

Under Title IX, UCM has a responsibility to respond promptly and effectively to reports of sexual misconduct. If UCM becomes aware of possible sexual misconduct, it will promptly and equitably investigate to determine what occurred and then take appropriate steps to resolve the situation and prevent its recurrence. UCM will work closely and cooperatively with local law enforcement on criminal investigations into allegations of sexual misconduct while also acting independently to resolve reports promptly and effectively. UCM will act to ensure the complainant is safe, including while an investigation is ongoing.

As a general matter, in the event of a report of sexual misconduct to UCM:

- There will be a prompt and effective response to the report;
- The complainant will be connected with important resources;
- UCM will ask the complainant how he/she would like UCM to respond (no investigation, informal or formal investigation);
- If there is an investigation, the complainant will not be expected to directly confront the respondent;
- UCM will notify the complainant and respondent of the UCM's decision and any corresponding action(s);
- Both the complainant and the respondent will have the right to appeal UCM's decision;
- UCM will take steps to protect and assist the complainant on an ongoing basis;
- Retaliation will not be tolerated.

Additional Details

UCM's actions in response to reports of sexual misconduct are also guided by the safety needs of the UCM community. If any occurrences of a sexual nature pose a general threat to the UCM community, UCM will determine whether and how to take affirmative steps to notify students, faculty and staff of the potential danger while working to alleviate the threat.

UCM investigations of possible sexual misconduct will be timely and impartial. Once a complaint has been made, UCM reserves the right to take whatever measures it deems necessary against a respondent in response to an allegation of sexual misconduct in order to protect student and employee rights and personal safety. In a UCM investigation, all parties will have the opportunity to provide witnesses and evidence. UCM investigations are conducted to take into account the totality of all evidence available, from various relevant sources, and a decision will be based on the "preponderance of evidence" standard (i.e., it is more likely than not that sexual harassment or misconduct occurred). Investigations will be thorough and may take three to four (3-4) weeks.

Once an investigation concludes, a UCM hearing officer reviews the findings and determines if UCM policy has been violated. The Title IX coordinator or designee will serve as an impartial hearing officer for matters of sexual misconduct. The Title IX officer or designee may meet with the complainant and the respondent before making a decision, but the two parties will not be required to be in the same room at the same time during this process. In cases where the respondent is unresponsive or unavailable to attend an administrative hearing, the hearing officer may make a decision based upon the information available. Review of investigative materials and subsequent hearings generally take one to two (1-2) weeks.

At the conclusion of an investigation, all parties will be notified in writing of the outcome. Either party may appeal these findings by contacting the Title IX Coordinator. This appeal must be submitted, in writing, within five (5) days of the original findings. In general, the entire investigation and resolution should take no more than sixty (60) days.

Please go to the Title IX homepage for a comprehensive discussion of Title IX and the resources available to students who may have experienced sexual misconduct.

For more information about Title IX and sexual assault complaints, please contact any of the following Title IX officers:

Corey Bowman (Title IX Coordinator)

Associate Vice President for Student Services
Office of Student Experience and Engagement
Administration 214, 660-543-4114

Rick Dixon (Deputy Title IX Coordinator)

Employee Relations Specialist
Office of Human Resources
Administration 101, 660-543-4255

Kathy Anderson (Deputy Title IX Coordinator)

Senior Associate Athletic Director/Internal Operations
Multipurpose 203, 660-543-4310

In addition to these individuals, students have other staff who they can approach for assistance. If one desires that details of the incident be kept confidential, they should speak with on-campus psychologists or counselors at the University's Counseling Center (660-543-4060), or campus health service providers at the University Health Center (660-543-4770). Campus counselors are available to help you free of charge and can be seen on an emergency basis during business hours. In addition, you may speak on and off-campus with members of the clergy and chaplains, who will also keep reports made to them confidential.

All other UCM staff, such as residence life staff and faculty, must report all available details to the Title IX Coordinator.

If you are unsure of someone's duties and ability to maintain your privacy, ask them before you talk to them. They will be able to tell you, and help you make decisions about who can help you best.

You also may always choose to make a formal report to officials of the institution (such as public safety, Title IX officers and others) who are able to directly act on your concerns. When a formal report is made, you have the right and can expect to have incidents of sexual misconduct impartially investigated and properly resolved through administrative procedures. Formal reporting still means that only people who need to know will be told, and information will be shared only as necessary with investigators, witnesses, and the accused individual. Information may also be shared with local law enforcement officers in order to protect victims of sexual misconduct from contact by possible perpetrators of sexual misconduct.

In all cases, your personal information will only be shared as necessary with as few people as possible, and all efforts will be made to protect your privacy.

More information about Title IX rights and protections and the hearing process can also be found on the Title IX homepage.

Digital Citizenship

Technology brings tremendous educational value to a student's experience at UCM. Successful students develop both the capability to use technology and the wisdom to know when and how to use it. To achieve this end, UCM strives to be a community comprised of principled students and educators who work collaboratively to build an online culture of academic discovery, critical but civil discourse, and full electronic participation in society.

As both partners in, and representatives of, this community, UCM students enjoy both the privileges and duties of Digital Citizenship. It is our belief that good digital citizens use the internet and social media effectively, critically and ethically.

Effective Use of digital technology requires students to develop and explore their own capacity to make informed choices in pursuit of their full potential. UCM challenges students to embrace emerging technologies and learn new skills. It is our hope that students will use these skills to develop the ability to adapt to educational challenges and cultural changes with a sense of optimism, excitement, discovery and hope.

Critical use of digital technology requires students to carefully examine the information and ideas they encounter online. We encourage students to learn, innovate, communicate and explore online while carefully considering and evaluating the reliability and trustworthiness of that information.

Ethical use of digital technology requires students to consciously consider how their participation in the online community affects themselves and others. As responsible digital citizens, students are expected to take reasonable precautions to guarantee their own personal safety, privacy, and the security of university resources they use to connect with the digital environment. We want students to be conscious of, and guardians of, their own online reputation and the digital dignity of the UCM community. Responsible digital citizens do not give out too much personal information online, misrepresent or negatively represent themselves through social media, or engage in conduct that constitutes harassment or discrimination as defined in applicable university policies, or that is otherwise prohibited by law, such as defamation, libel, or slander. Additionally, ethical digital citizens are conscious of and respectful of the intellectual property of others and they are expected to comply with laws, license agreements, and contracts governing network, software and hardware use. Any breach of computer security, harmful access or invasion of privacy may result in a student's immediate removal from UCM.

Cyber-bullying, Cyber-harassment and Cyber-stalking

UCM is committed to supporting students when they are faced with assaults or attacks that might limit their ability to participate in the digital community or reach their academic potential. Digital citizens should understand that attacking an Individual through cyber-conduct that constitutes harassment or discrimination as defined in applicable university policies, or that is otherwise prohibited by law, is just as inappropriate and unacceptable as engaging in such conduct in-person. Students who believe they are targets of such misconduct should seek assistance from hall staff or the Office of Student Experience and Engagement.

What is Cyber-bullying?

Cyber-bullying is bullying that takes place using electronic technology. Electronic technology includes devices and equipment such as cell phones, computers, and tablets as well as communication tools including social media sites, text messages, chat, and websites.

- Students who are being cyber-bullied are often bullied in person as well. Additionally, students who are cyberbullied have a harder time getting away from the behavior.
- Cyber-bullying can happen twenty-four (24) hours a day, seven (7) days a week, and reach a kid even when he or she is alone. It can happen any time of the day or night.
- Cyber-bullying messages and images can be posted anonymously and distributed quickly to a very wide audience. It can be difficult and sometimes impossible to trace the source.
- Deleting inappropriate or harassing messages, texts, and pictures is extremely difficult after they have been posted or sent.

Cyber-harassment

Cyber-harassment usually pertains to unlawful threatening or harassing email messages, instant messages, or to blog entries or websites dedicated solely to tormenting an individual.

Cyber-stalking

Cyber-stalking is the use of the Internet, email or other electronic communications to stalk, and generally refers to a pattern of threatening or malicious behaviors. Cyber-stalking may be considered the most dangerous of the three types of Internet harassment, based on posing credible threat of harm.

Effects

Cell phones and computers themselves are not to blame for cyber-bullying, cyber-harassment or cyber-stalking. Social media sites can be used for positive activities, like connecting students with friends and family, helping students with school, and for entertainment. But these tools can also be used to hurt other people. Whether done in person or through technology, the effects are similar.

It is also important to understand that Missouri State law specifically addresses certain forms of behavior online.

Treating Others with Respect

Assault, Intimidation & Bullying

In order to promote learning and the development of an academic community, the university environment must be free from violence and the threat of violence. For this reason, any physical confrontation, including fighting, threats of violence, and domestic violence, will be confronted. Due to the significant potential that violent behavior could prevent others from being successful in the academic environment, anyone engaged in violence or threats of violence may be immediately removed from UCM and/or their status as a student.

Additionally, the community cannot thrive when some members are prevented or intimidated from participating due to misconduct. For this reason, persons who engage in conduct that constitutes harassment or discrimination as defined in applicable university policies, or that is otherwise prohibited by law, will be held accountable for their actions.

Bullying Definition

Bullying has been the subject of considerable public discussion and is often misunderstood. There is a difference between experiencing mean behavior and experiencing bullying. Bullying occurs when a person is exposed, repeatedly and over time, to extreme negative actions on the part of one or more other persons, and he or she has difficulty defending himself or herself. Bullying is unwanted aggressive behavior that involves a real or perceived power imbalance.

Bullying can take many forms including verbal conduct, such as, but not limited to, physical threats, incitement, illegal intimidation, discrimination and harassment, or defamation, libel, or slander. However, as a public institution, UCM upholds freedom of speech rights grounded in the first amendment to the U.S. Constitution and similar state laws. Exposure to mere speech that a person disagrees with or finds offensive does not constitute bullying. Physical bullying involves hurting a person's body or possessions and may include hitting, pushing, slapping, and tripping.

The University takes bullying very seriously and does not condone any behavior that compromises the educational opportunities of others.

Hazing

UCM values the learning and service that is possible through active involvement in Student Organizations. The majority of learning in college will take place outside the classroom and this learning is greatly enhanced by active student involvement and engagement with others. In order to reach this goal, however, these group environments must be completely free from hazing.

Hazing in university environments is frequently misunderstood. Hazing includes a wide range of behaviors and activities that may not seem harmful to participants but are unacceptable from the standpoint of the University. It is not confined to Greek chapters and it will be confronted wherever it manifests.

Student groups may unwisely choose to use hazing as a way to try and achieve the admirable goals of group membership selectivity, group unity, and loyalty. UCM wants to help students learn how to build strong groups without relying on strategies that intentionally cause their prospective members harm. Student organizations that historically may have used hazing in their organizations are invited to consult with the Office of Student Activities or other university resources to learn better options for building strong groups. Coming forward to seek assistance will not result in retroactive punishment for hazing incidents.

Consent to be hazed does not excuse hazing and will not be considered an excuse or a defense for this dangerous and unacceptable behavior. It also does not matter where the hazing occurs. The University is empowered to take action whether the hazing takes place on or off university premises.

It is important all groups and organizations understand this statement: Hazing puts others at risk and may undermine all of the good work done by a student organization; it will not be tolerated at UCM.

To assist groups in planning safe, constructive activities, Missouri's law regarding hazing should be considered:

"Hazing", a willful act occurring on or off the campus of an educational institution, directed against a student or a prospective member of an organization operating under the sanction of an educational institution, that recklessly endangers the mental or physical health or safety of a student or prospective member for the purpose of initiation or admission into or continued membership in any such organization to the extent that such person is knowingly placed at probable risk of the loss of life or probable bodily or psychological harm.

Acts of hazing shall include:

(a) Any activity which recklessly endangers the physical health or safety of the student or prospective member, including but not limited to physical brutality, whipping, beating, branding, exposure to the elements, forced consumption of any food, liquor, drug or other substance or forced smoking or chewing of tobacco products; or

(b) Any activity which recklessly endangers the mental health of the student or prospective member, including but not limited to sleep deprivation, physical confinement, or other extreme stress inducing activity; or

(c) Any activity that requires the student or prospective member to perform a duty or task which involves a violation of the criminal laws of this state or any political subdivision in this state.

At UCM, hazing is even more broadly defined to include any action taken or situation created by members of an organization or group that intentionally cause embarrassment, harassment, or ridicule.

Examples of hazing activities may include but are not limited to the following:

- use of alcohol
- paddling in any form
- creation of excessive fatigue
- physical and psychological shocks
- quests
- treasure hunts
- scavenger hunts
- road trips or any other such activities carried on outside or inside of the confines of the University, chapter house or private residence
- wearing of public apparel which is conspicuous and not normally in good taste
- engaging in public stunts and buffoonery
- morally degrading or humiliating games and activities
- any other activities which are not consistent with fraternal law, ritual or policy; state and federal law, or the regulations and policies of UCM.

If the activity appears to be hazing, it may be treated as hazing even if it does not fit any of the preceding descriptions. In order to remain in good standing, student groups are expected to educate their membership, seek training for their leadership, and report all incidents of possible hazing.

Creating a Reasonably Safe Environment

The University of Central Missouri is committed to creating a reasonably safe environment for collegiate activities. Each of us can promote safety in our community by knowing and adhering to university policies, taking steps to protect ourselves and others, and promptly reporting criminal or suspicious behavior to university authorities.

It is our expectation that students will actively seek to improve the campus environment by sharing their ideas about how to improve safety on campus. Students are also expected to refrain from creating any form of fire, safety or health hazards, and they are expected to operate their personal vehicles in a safe, legal and responsible manner.

Please be aware that violence between students, threats to self or others, destructive or disruptive behavior, and disturbances of the learning environment or other university processes cannot be tolerated. Students who disrupt the learning of others and students who engage in acts of violence, on or off campus, may face severe disciplinary action including suspension from the University of Central Missouri. Obstructing or disrupting any university processes, including instruction, research, study, administration, meetings, ceremonies, or student activities is also a violation of university policy.

For safety reasons, all students are expected to handle emergency equipment appropriately and to only activate fire alarms in the case of an emergency. Damaged or misused emergency equipment creates a hazard and can be time consuming to repair. Students who misuse this equipment should expect substantial fines.

Additionally, please be aware that weapons are not allowed on the University of Central Missouri campus (including main campus, classroom demonstrations, the airport, the farm, and all residences). This includes, but is not limited to, all forms of firearms, or any mechanical or gas operated mechanism that propels a projectile (such as nerf guns and airsoft guns), ammunition, fireworks and knives with any blade more than four (4) inches in length, throwing stars and blackjacks. The possession or use of non-lethal weapons, projectiles and small fireworks is also prohibited. Anyone who brings weapons to campus may face immediate removal from campus and students may face suspension.

UCM strives to create an environment that supports the free exchange of ideas and we support the rights of students and others to peacefully gather in support of a cause or concern. Any acts detrimental to the functioning of the University as an academic community, however, are incongruent with the University's mission and may be treated as a serious breach of university policy. Disturbances of the learning environment or other university processes cannot be tolerated. This includes:

- A. Participating in group behavior that involves damage to property, actual violence or threatened damage to property or violence;
- B. Inciting a group toward immediate violent behavior;
- C. Defying or refusing to obey police orders to disperse when the group is engaged in violent actions;

- D. Inciting or encouraging a group to defy police orders to disperse when the group is engaged in violent actions;
- E. Assaulting, throwing objects at, or otherwise endangering police officers or city or university officials and employees engaged in quelling a riot or mass disturbance;
- F. Starting, stoking or using fire, creating barricades, or blocking streets and passage ways, as part of a riot or mass disturbance;
- G. Interfering with police, fire and emergency medical personnel in carrying out their duties during a riot or mass disturbance; or
- H. Attempting to circumvent or defeat police crowd-control measures.

Anyone who disrupts university events or processes or interferes with the learning of others may be removed from campus and students who violate this policy may be subject to immediate interim suspension from the University of Central Missouri.

Creating and maintaining a safe environment requires participation by each community member. As a student, you are absolutely expected to comply with directions, instructions, and reasonable requests of university officials and their designees, law enforcement and emergency personnel when they are performing their job-related duties. For example, a student is required to produce his/her university ID card upon request of an official. A student is also required to evacuate a building when directed to do so by university staff or emergency personnel.

Failure to complete a learning action plan or other mandated activity must be treated as a progressively serious policy violation. (Violation of this policy may be determined administratively and does not require an additional educational conduct meeting.)

General Expectations for Ethical and Responsible Conduct

As long as a student is enrolled at UCM, the University expects them to conduct themselves as ethical and responsible adults both on campus and off campus. Students may be held accountable for their choices regardless of where those choices take place. The University also recognizes that mistakes will be made. It is our belief that your character is reflected in how you take responsibility for correcting those errors in judgment.

The University expects students to behave as rational, ethical, responsible adults and avoid situations that call those qualities into questions. For these reasons, the following actions and activities are restricted:

- Assisting in the Violation of Policy - Helping someone else to violate policy is an example of poor decision making. A student who assists others in violating university policy will be treated as a responsible participant.
- Attempted Violation of Policy - Students who knowingly attempt to violate policy, but are prevented from doing so, will still be held accountable for their poor decisions. An attempt to violate any provision of university policy will be considered a violation of university policy.

- Behavior of Guests and Dependents - Due to the nature of the campus community, students are expected to accept responsibility for the actions of their guest(s) and dependent family members. If a student is having difficulty communicating expectations to their guests, they should ask for assistance from staff or choose to limit who they invite into the community environment. University Housing reserves the right to remove and restrict guest(s) from university housing facilities and property, when behavior deems necessary.
- Evidence of Policy Violation in the Public Domain - UCM does not aggressively monitor social media for policy violations but we also do not ignore a student's decision-making that is evident in the public domain. Policy violations discovered posted on public domain sources may lead to university action. Students are encouraged to take precautions with personal information and postings on such places as (Facebook, Twitter, Blogs, etc.).
- Gambling - In accordance with state law, gambling is not permitted on University of Central Missouri property.
- Hate related offenses - Committing a criminal offense against a person or property motivated in whole or in part by an offender's bias against a race, color, religion, disability, national origin, ethnic origin, gender, or sexual orientation [including gender identity] is unacceptable in a civil community and will not be tolerated at UCM.
- Invasion of Privacy - Everyone in the University environment should expect a reasonable level of privacy and no one should be subjected to eavesdropping, surveillance, or other intrusions by means of bugging devices, concealed recorders, magnifying optics, webcams, etc. Additionally, knowingly viewing, photographing, or filming another person in a state of full or partial nudity without that person's knowledge and consent is unethical and a violation of policy and illegal.
- Littering & Vandalism - UCM has a beautiful campus and well-maintained residential facilities and classrooms; careless littering is harmful to this environment and disrespectful of the hard work performed by university custodial staff. Destroying, damaging or vandalizing university property or the property of another is very harmful to the community and will not be tolerated.
- Solicitation - Door to door solicitation, as well as sliding advertisements and other material under doors, is generally unwelcome by other students and is prohibited unless conducted by authorized personnel such as Community Advisors in the performance of their jobs.
- Transportation/Parking Violations – This includes violations of the University's Parking and Traffic Regulations including (but not limited to) violations of bicycle regulations, low speed vehicle policy, skateboards etc. policy, habitual parking violations or any violation that may be hazardous to life or property.
- Trespassing and Unauthorized Access - Trespassing, entering into or upon, or using restricted university facilities (for example unauthorized access to roofs, maintenance rooms, computer labs, etc.) can be dangerous, cause harm to you or others, or lead to property damage. This includes but is not limited to access gained by unauthorized or duplicate keys, bugging devices, computer codes or other methods or devices used to afford unauthorized access to restricted areas or information or operation of equipment.

Criminal conduct involving the violation of local, state or federal statutes shall also constitute a violation of policy and may result in university action even if this behavior is not prosecuted by public officials.

Housing Specific Policies

Students who live in the residence halls and campus apartments have a unique and exciting opportunity to directly engage with other students in a vibrant and dynamic learning environment. Compared to students who live off campus, students who live in university housing have higher grade point averages, higher retention rates, and report greater satisfaction with the University. Living in this environment includes responsibilities that are unique to residential life.

These responsibilities are codified into policies designed to help create a community that is:

- conducive to learning
- safety conscious
- respectful of others
- responsibly regulated

Some of these policies address how you should interact with others (roommate disagreements, cohabitation, use of shared resources, actions that disrupt the educational atmosphere, etc.) while other policies address environmental matters directly related to safety (fire safety concerns, creating hazards). You are encouraged to reflect on these responsibilities and ask staff for clarification if you do not understand the purpose of a policy.

The residential community is a learning community. UCM wants students to develop important communication and social skills through their experiences in the residence halls. Residents will learn lifelong skills of living cooperatively with others, being an active member of a community, respecting others' space and property, and how to appropriately confront and work through conflicts with neighbors.

Occasionally there are competing interests in a living learning environment. For example, one student may desire a celebrative environment where they can share their personal musical tastes with others, while another student in that same community may desire a quiet study environment so they can prepare for a test or exam. The following policies will help you navigate these competing interests. Students are encouraged to communicate and enjoy their experience while recognizing and balancing the needs of others for a quiet study environment. The following policies apply to students who live in campus housing as well as to their guests. In all cases, students will be held accountable for the actions of their guests, so it is important that students make responsible choices about who they invite into this community. Students who live in campus housing have a responsibility to discuss these responsibilities with their guests.

A Community that is Conducive to Learning

Housing staff members strive to create a vibrant and dynamic community while preserving a learning atmosphere. This is a difficult balance. In general, no noise should be heard in the hallways or by neighbors including those above or below the student's room. Residents should refrain from running, horseplay and loud communications in the hallways, stairwells, and other public areas and slamming doors. Residents should be able to study and sleep without undue disturbance. Specific courtesy and quiet hours may be developed for your hall community and you are expected to honor these covenants.

In order to maintain an environment conducive to learning, Housing has specific policies/restrictions/expectations.

Policies Conducive to Learning:

Alcohol Policy:

- Alcohol is allowed on upper-class communities in housing as long as the residents of the room/apartment and everyone present are all over the age of twenty-one (21). To prevent a disruptive party-like atmosphere, no more than four (4) people can be present in a room where alcohol is being consumed.
- Mass quantities of alcohol (such as kegs) are not congruent with the responsible atmosphere we are trying to create and will not be allowed in the halls.
- For this same reason, alcohol competitions (beer pong, etc.) are also not allowed in the housing.
- Beer bottles and cans must be disposed of properly.
- The door must remain closed when alcohol is being consumed.

Alcohol is not allowed in first year communities or in common areas of the housing facilities.

Hall Sports:

- Residents should refrain from running, horseplay and other activities that can create noise and distractions from residents' ability to sleep and study.

Noise Policy:

- Quiet Hours are Sunday through Thursday, ten (10) p.m. - ten (10) a.m., and Friday & Saturday, midnight - ten (10) a.m. No noise should be heard in the hallways or by neighbors including those above or below student rooms during Quiet Hours.
- Courtesy Hours are in effect twenty-four (24) hours a day. Residents should refrain from slamming doors, running, horseplay and loud communications in the hallways, stairwells, and other public areas. Residents should be able to study and sleep without undue disturbance.

A Community that is Safety Conscious

When students live in close proximity, poor decisions or careless choices can significantly impact on the safety of others. For example, a candle left burning in a room after residents have gone to class could result in a fire that harms or displaces hundreds of students. For this reason, we are very restrictive with personal items that could pose a risk to others or that pose even a small risk of fire.

Policies Concerning Safety:

- Air Conditioners - Students are not allowed to install window air conditioning units. Non-window air conditioning units may be allowed pending approval from the Residence Hall Director and must use one thousand (1000) watts or less of power and should have an energy rating of ten (10) or more. Portable AC units should not be left unattended for long periods of time.
- In university apartments where air conditioners are provided, the air conditioner should not be used when outside temperatures are below fifty (50) degrees. Running air conditioners in low outside temperatures can damage the unit and the student may be responsible for cost of repair/replacement.
- Bunk Beds - Students who choose to bunk their beds are expected to get a safety rail to install on the top bunk. Safety rails are available at the front desk of the residence hall.
- Can & Bottle Collections - In order to create a safe and healthy environment the collection of cans and bottles for display is not permitted. All cans and plastic bottles should be disposed of via the recycling bins in the rooms and buildings, glass bottles are disposed with the trash.
- Candles/Incense - Candles and incense can smell pleasant to some while creating an unpleasant environment for others. Left unattended, these items have also led to damaging and, in some cases, deadly fires. Students are not allowed to burn candles or incense in the housing facilities. Candles may be used as decorations if the wicks have been removed. Scented warmer devices including those using wax cubes are not allowed in housing facilities. Desk top candle warmers maybe used when residents are present in the room and cannot be left on unattended.
- Cooking Appliances -
 - o Residence Halls: Only microwaves and coffee makers are permitted to be used in student rooms. Other cooking appliances must be used in the community kitchen and must NEVER be left unattended.
 - o Apartments: All cooking appliances may be used following appliance instructions and proper safety measures are taken. Appliances in use should not be left unattended.
- Decorations - All decorations must remain on the door or inside the student room (nothing should be in the hallway other than small welcome mats immediately up against the door). All electronic decorations inside the room must be UL approved devices. Cans and bottles cannot be used as decorations. Decorations in the hallway, corridors, floor lounges, and stairwells cannot be electrical decorations or products that have limited life/shelf spans such as pumpkins, flowers, food items, etc. Decorations in corridors, hallways, floor lounges and stairwells can NEVER impede safety instructions and equipment. Common Lobby spaces of the building may be decorated with support and assistance from hall staff. All decorations in lobby spaces must be removed at break closings.

- Evacuations/Drills - While UCM strives to create a safe environment in university housing, some emergencies may occur. Drills will also be conducted on a regular basis. In an emergency or emergency drill, all students must comply with the directions of housing staff and university officials. For fire alarms students are expected to exit the building. For tornado alarms expected to go to the appropriate interior location. Students may not return to their rooms until instructed. Evacuation routes (halls, stairways, lobbies and lounges) must remain clear of obstructions. Failing to evacuate or go to the appropriate location will lead to the conduct process and may result in a one hundred dollar ($100) fine assessed to the student's account.
- Food Preparation - Food may be prepared in microwaves and coffee makers in student rooms. Clean up of food prep should take place in the community kitchen sinks, and left overs and garbage from food prep must go in the trash, not down sinks or toilets.
- Grills – Charcoal Bar-B-Que are NOT permitted to be used. Gas or Electric grills may only be used when at least six (6) feet from the building. Residents should exercise appropriate care in using these grills and should never be left unattended when in use.
- Halogen Lamps - For fire safety reasons, Halogen lamps with bulbs over one hundred (100) watts are not permitted in the residence halls.
- Hazardous Materials - Any form of hazardous material and containers are not allowed in university housing.
- Hazardous/Strong Odor Products - Products that produce strong odors that may be considered hazardous or create discomfort to the community (paints, acrylic nail products, etc.) are not allowed to be used inside housing facilities. They must be used outside, but can be stored inside if they are not flammable and are tightly sealed producing no odor.
- Hoverboards - Due to safety reasons hoverboards are not permitted in any university housing facility at any time.
- Lava Lamps- Lava lamps are not permitted in Housing facilities.
- Live/cut trees - For safety and cleanliness reasons, no live/cut trees may be used at holidays for decoration.
- Lofts - Many students choose to have a loft in their room to add floor space. For safety reasons, only approved lofts rented through the loft rental program can be used in any residence hall room.
- Microwaves - Microwave ovens are permitted with no more than one thousand (1000) watts.
- Needles & Syringes - Residents using legal medications which require injections should not dispose of needles or syringes in the trash can. The Campus Community Health can provide containers for disposal at no charge.
- Other Electrical Appliances - Underwriters Laboratories (UL) electrical appliances (hair dryer, curling/straightening irons, irons, etc.) are permitted to be used in student rooms only when the student is present.
- Refrigerators – Residence Halls: Refrigerators are permitted in student rooms if they are six (6.0) cubic feet or smaller and use less than one thousand (1000) watts of power. Apartments: Must use University provided refrigerator.

- Space Heaters - Space heaters are not permitted in the housing facilities, due to high electrical demands and other safety reasons. If you are having trouble regulating the temperature in your room/apartment, please contact your Community Advisor (CA) or Apartment Community Assistant (ACA) for help.
- Tampering with Life Safety Equipment - It is never acceptable to tamper with alarms, pull stations, detectors, extinguishers, emergency evacuation signs and postings or any equipment that helps monitor and insure your safety. Hanging items from, covering, or disabling smoke detectors/sprinkler heads, removing emergency evacuation signs and postings and discharging of fire extinguishers for non-fire reasons is considered tampering with fire safety equipment. The United Student Housing Association (USHA) determined a charge of two hundred twenty-five dollars ($225) for tampering with life safety equipment.
- University Property & Equipment: Students may not alter any University property and equipment (such as thermostats, faucets, painting of walls, etc.,) Doing so will result in students being assessed the charge for University personnel to correct the alteration.
- Window Opening Devices - For safety and security measures the windows in the residence halls and some apartments are restricted to opening an appropriate space. Devices to ensure this happens are installed on all windows. In accordance with United Student Housing Association's recommendation, tampering with the window opening device can lead to a two hundred twenty-five-dollar ($225) fee assessed to the student(s).
- Window Safety - Throwing any items from windows is dangerous and prohibited. Speakers and other noise devices are not permitted in windows or to be placed facing out. Leaning out windows is prohibited.
- Window Screens - Window screens must remain securely fastened to the window frame. Please be aware that removing the screen is not allowed and will result in a fine of the cost for repairs.

A Community that is Respectful of Others

University housing brings together students from all walks of life. It is likely that you will have a roommate and you will certainly have neighbors. You will almost certainly be exposed to students from other cultures, international students, and students with very different life experiences than your own. This exciting assemblage of individuals provides tremendous opportunity for learning, but for the group to successfully transform into a community there must be a foundation of respect among its members.

Respect Your Roommate and Suitemates

Some students have grown up sharing rooms with their siblings while others have always had their own room. Some students like to go to sleep early while others generally stay up quite late. Some students study in their rooms while others prefer to go to the library. Small differences like these can become big challenges if you do not enjoy mutual respect with your roommates and suitemates.

As a member of the residential community, you are expected to show respect to others; this is particularly important with those who share your space. It is very important that you show your respect for your roommates and suitemates as they also make this important transition to college life. You can do this by discussing expectations, developing roommate agreements, and generally talking openly and honestly with each other. For example, cleaning the bathroom is the equal responsibility of all persons living in the suite. Bathrooms should be cleaned on a regular basis with a schedule agreed to by all students living in the suite. You and your suitemates should discuss this and other issues. If you have trouble starting this discussion, ask your CA for help. Roommate and Suitemate Agreements are available to facilitate discussion and agreements among the parties. Please understand that only residents assigned to a room/apartment are permitted to live there and keep belongings in the room/bathroom.

Respect Your Guests (Guest Policy)

Students are encouraged to have guests visit them in their room or apartment. A guest is anyone not officially assigned to live in the room/apartment regardless of their gender. Any guest staying in the room past midnight must have permission from host's roommate prior to the guest staying. The host is responsible for the behavior of the guest at all times and any location within the building. Additionally, at a certain point, a guest has to leave. Guests may not spend more than three (3) consecutive nights or no more than nine (9) nights per month in the room/apartment.

Respect Your Community

All residents are responsible for maintaining and caring for the space they share with each other. Common area damage (vandalism) is the responsibility of the community where it occurs. Residents may be held responsible for common area damages that occur in the building (hallways, stairwells, lobbies, lounges, entries). University Housing has created a Student Damage Review Board which is comprised of students. This group will make recommendations as to when it is appropriate to charge some or all members of a community for public area damage. Charges will be posted to student accounts. Tobacco use of any kind including electronic smoking devices, vaping or smokeless tobacco is not allowed on UCM property (except inside personal vehicles). To view the University's policy on the use of tobacco go to <http://www.ucmo.edu/upo/bog/>.

Respect Your New Home

Students will spend a significant amount of time in their new home and they are expected to take good care of this space. Students will be responsible for any damage to their room or furniture. No nails or permanent mounting devices can be used on walls, doors, or furniture. Damages done to doors or residue left on room and closet doors as results of decorations may result in charges to the student.

A Community that is Responsibly Regulated

As discussed earlier, University Housing provides a great opportunity to participate in a unique and important college experience - the residential community. In this community you can learn about cultural differences, socialize with your peers, relax, celebrate, be a leader, and form friendships that last a lifetime. It is dynamic and exciting, and it can, at times, be a bit overwhelming - especially for the staff who are trying to help you make the most of this experience.

To manage this complex environment, additional regulations must be responsibly upheld.

Responsible Regulations:

•Animals (Service Animals and Emotional Support Animals)

Only approved Service and Emotional Support Animals are permitted in Housing facilities. Guests are NOT allowed to bring animals into Housing facilities.

- o Service Animals: Only individuals who have a disability and a trained service animal as recognized by the Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) should have a service animal in the halls. Individuals who require a service animal may wish to register with the Office of Accessibility Services.

However, emotional support animals will be permitted in Housing facilities with prior approval from the Office of Accessibility Services pursuant to University procedures and standards and regulations of the University's Animals on Campus Policy. In accordance with the University policy on Animals on Campus: Service and Emotional Support Animals must be controlled by the owner/handler and pet sitting/care of the animal by others is not permitted. Student must take the animal with them or board them OFF campus if leaving campus for extended periods of time (overnight/weekends/University break periods/holidays). Behavior problems of the ESA could lead to removal of the ESA from campus.

Student Staff

Student staff members (CAs, ACAs, OAs, Safe Team members, etc.) and student leaders (Hall Council, USHA, SGA) are given tremendous responsibility in this learning environment. These student leaders are trained, charged, and counseled to assist others to make good decisions in this learning laboratory. In some ways, these individuals are similar to teaching assistants who you might encounter in the classroom; they are charged with pursuing their own academic progress while also assisting peers to learn. This can be very challenging, and all students should understand that the University empowers and fully supports these young leaders in their leadership roles.

Community Advisors

One of the most important people on your floor, and the first person you should go to for most non-emergency situations, is your Community Advisor (CA). The CA is a carefully selected and trained upper-class student who is prepared to help with transition issues like homesickness, locating things on campus, roommate issues and more. They will plan events and activities for the floor and help get you connected with other students.

CAs will also confront inappropriate behavior to help the community be an orderly place to live and study. They are acting as university officials and their instructions should be followed. They are just doing their job to help you and the community. The most important thing to remember about CAs is they are right there with you, and they have also been in your shoes as new students. They are great resources, allies, mentors and friends.

Chapter Assistants

The Chapter Assistant is a carefully selected and trained upper-class member of a fraternity or sorority who is prepared to help you and assist your chapter. They also will confront inappropriate behavior to help the community be an orderly place to live and study. They are acting as university officials and their instructions should be followed. They are just doing their job to help you and the community.

Apartment Community Assistants

Student staff members (ACAs) are given tremendous responsibility in the apartment areas of Central Village and Greenwood Park. These student leaders are trained, charged, and counseled to assist others to make good decisions for a responsible and respectful community within these apartment areas. They assist residents with all move-in and out paperwork, reporting maintenance concerns, and enforcing University and Housing policies.

Residence Hall Directors

Residence Hall Directors (RHDs) are live-in graduate students pursuing a degree in College Student Personnel Administration, which means they plan to continue working with students during their career. The RHD supervises the community advisor staff and the other student staff in the building. The RHD advises the Hall Council of the building and is very involved in helping your building develop a strong community. Their role is to help the CA staff meet your needs and ensure the building is properly maintained.

Your RHD is the second person to go to with any issues that arise and any building maintenance problems. They are also a conduct educator, which means if you experience a behavioral challenge, you will meet with them to discuss how to prevent poor choices from harming your success.

Office Assistants

Office Assistants (OAs) are students who work at the front desk in your building, which is staffed twenty-four (24) hours a day. OAs answer questions, distribute mail and most importantly, monitor your safety. They make sure the fire safety equipment is monitored at all times and provide services like selling stamps, making change, checking out equipment and much more.

Hall Council

This group of residents of each building plans and implements programs that support and develop a spirit of community among the residents. They also discuss issues and concerns of your hall. Hall Councils purchase supplies for students to use on a limited time period from the front desks. Officers are elected at the beginning of the school year. This is a great leadership opportunity!

Registered Student Organization (RSO) policies:

Classroom education is a priority in your college career, but the learning experience should not stop there. Eighty (80) percent of learning may take place outside the classroom. Becoming an active part of campus life will be one of the most important steps toward making the most of your college career and charting a successful future.

Becoming involved in student activities will help you develop new friendships, get hands-on experience and develop skills such as teamwork, decision making, and time management. Campus groups and organizations can allow you to make a positive impact on the campus and community as well as gain a feeling of accomplishment.

The Office of Student Activities is committed to extending education beyond the classroom by offering students experiences that will be rewarding and enriching to them personally, intellectually, socially, and physically. The experiences you gain through your involvement will stay with you throughout your college years and last a lifetime.

UCM is proud to recognize over two hundred (200) student organizations including:

- Academic/Departmental Organizations that are tied to an academic program or department on campus
- Community Service Organizations that donate the majority of their time to being a service organization
- Cultural Heritage/Ethnic Identity Organizations that represent ethnic culture and heritage
- Honor Society Organizations that are recognized as an honors group. These groups have strict guidelines with GPA and hours.
- Recreational/Club Sport Organizations that are physically active
- Spiritual Organizations that are religiously based
- Social Greek Organizations with recognized charters on campus
- Special Interest/Miscellaneous Organizations that do not fall into any of the other categories but still have an interest to be on campus

The Office of Student Activities has articulated policies to help these students provide the best possible experience for its members.

If a student organization is believed to have violated a policy, the matter will be reviewed by the Assistant Director of Student Activities, the Director of University Housing (for registered Greek Organizations) or by their designees. This review may include mandatory conversations with group members and group leadership. If the organization is a recognized social Greek organization, this review may also include representation from appropriate regional or national organizations. Once this review is concluded, the review officer will reflect upon the possible policy violations and consider matters such as the following:

If the organization is a recognized social Greek organization, this review may also include representation from appropriate regional or national organizations. Once this review is concluded, the review officer will reflect upon the possible policy violations and consider matters such as the following:

- Was one or more of the organization's officers or authorized members acting in the scope of his/her general responsibilities when the policy was violated?
- Was the policy violation approved by a majority vote of those members of the organization present and voting?
- Were the individuals who violated a policy acting in the scope committee assignments?
- Did a majority of the members of an organization present or participating in the policy violation; did a substantial number of the group's members have knowledge of the violation?
- Would a reasonable person outside the incident, consider the policy violation to be a reflection on the organization?

If the Assistant Director of Student Activities or designee determines that an organization has likely violated a college regulation or policy, the organization may face a range of consequences including loss of university privileges for space utilization, resource allocation or university recognition as a Registered Student Organization (RSO).

The intent of these consequences is to guide organizations toward appropriate activities and choices. In all cases, however, the safety of members is paramount.

Please be aware that individual students who violate policy as a part of an organization may have consequences in addition to those consequences associated with the group.
