

Alexander Luria and the psychology of the XXIst century

SECOND INTERNATIONAL LURIA MEMORIAL CONFERENCE

Moscow, 24-27 September, 2002

Dear Colleague,

The year 2002 marks the centenary (100 years) of the birth of Alexander Romanovich Luria (1902 - 1977). To commemorate the life and scientific achievements of this world-renowned psychologist, Moscow State University, in collaboration with the Russian Academy of Sciences, the Russian Academy of Education, the Russian Psychological Association and the International Neuropsychological Society, is pleased to announce an International Memorial Conference.

The Second International Luria Memorial Conference will be held from September 24th to 27th, 2002 in Moscow. The conference will include plenary and thematic sessions (oral and poster presentations), round table discussions and evening lectures. A competition will be organized for the papers of students, Ph.D. fellows and young researchers (under 33 years old).

The Conference program will focus on the following main groups of topics:

1. Luria's contribution to the development of modern psychology in the world (general psychology, developmental psychology, special education, psychogenetics, ethnopsychology, psychophysiology, psycholinguistics).

2. A.R. Luria as a founder of neuropsychology (cognitive neuropsychology, methods of neuropsychological assessment, developmental neuropsychology, neuropsychological rehabilitation and correction, interhemispheric asymmetry and interaction, neuropsychology of individual differences, neuropsychological studies in conjoint branches of research).

3. The life and work of A.R. Luria - individuals, events, history (main aspects of his scientific biography, collaboration with eminent scientists, evolution of ideas and theories)
